PRESS RELEASE

Project "energy detectives" starts at Braunform

To identify the potential for energy savings at Braunform our apprentices have been appointed as "energy detectives". Background is the accelerated energy transition of the German government by closing nuclear power plants and to move towards renewable energy sources such as solar, wind power etc. for the good of our environment. To save energy and also money – this is also contributed by Braunform. To support this, an energy management system according to DIN EN ISO 50001 will be established with the aim to optimize the entire organization energetically.

As part of the trainee project our apprentices will investigate four different potential energy hogs within this year.
